

a new hero of mine

It's entirely likely that, because I live in a literal world of political correctness, I have become hypersensitive to 'the other side'...that hazy nebulon that we all love to window dress but rarely care enough to appreciate in its own rite. You know, reality.

So hats off to this Hospital Director for choking back all conventional bedside manor and instead opting to prescribe a fat dose of reality to the narcissistic jackass that jumped off a hotel balcony with his two kids in tow because he was mad at his wife. Doctor, you are my hero of the week...

(CNN) -- A British man is facing a murder charge after his son, 6, died and his daughter, 2, was injured when the trio plunged from a hotel balcony in Greece.

The man jumped from the fourth-floor hotel balcony with their two children on Tuesday, apparently after arguing with his wife. The incident took place at the Petra Mare Hotel, a 227-bedroom four-star beachfront hotel in Lerapetra, a popular holiday destination on the island, PA said.

*Panayotis Spatharakis, director of the Heraklion Hospital, told the Daily Mirror: "We asked him why he did it and he told us he was very drunk and could not exactly remember what happened." Summing up the bitterness of locals, (Spatharakis) told the paper: "I feel that once he recovers and understands what he has done he should commit suicide."

The Daily Mirror reported that Hogan's plight after the plunge brought little sympathy from angry locals who surrounded his stretcher to scream abuse.

Yes, fuck you very much. And again, hats off to you doctor.
